Hosting Software Hosterdo Overview Hosters do not provide web servers; they host websites. Typically, they do not add extra features to its website but just let it stay as it is. Additional features may include search engine optimization, web site firewall, online backup, and remote access. Hosters play a key role when it comes to Internet publishing. Functionality Hosters help users to manage their websites and online presence. They usually offer domain names, email accounts, free online hosting service, website builders, and easy website migration. Advantages Hosting software can be designed to be friendly to the user. This software is easy to understand, manage, and use. Some software allows visitors to quickly access pages hosted by hosting servers without the need to download the webpage to their computers. Hosting software can host multiple websites on a single server. This frees the user from having to pay for software and servers. Disadvantages The hosting software may have limited functionality and performance compared to fully-featured web servers. It can be difficult to transfer websites from one server to another. Features It is important to select a program based on the intended purpose of the hosting software. Selecting a less expensive product may allow for convenient management of several websites. With it, you can link the IP address of your computer to a name that's easily remembered. It works with all routers and operating systems. No-IP supports IPv4 and IPv6. How does it work? When you access the Internet, your computer gets an IP address from your Internet provider. It is a numeric identifier that is used to route Internet traffic to and from your computer. Every time your computer transmits a message over the Internet, it also transmits its current IP address with the message. If you want to access your computer, you need to know its IP address. But, since your IP address is dynamic, it may be difficult to remember. Why would I need this? If you are the administrator or just a network user, you want to know where your computer or systems are on the network every time they are online. How many computers can I manage? You can manage as many computers as you like. Why would I need this?
