Point Blank Turkey - Installation

Once you've finished reading this article and you've decided that you want to learn how to inject your own DLLs into your batch file, please continue. You will need several things to make this work properly. The first thing you need is a copy of Windows 7, Windows XP, or Windows Vista. The version that you have installed on your PC will determine which branch of the game you will want to inject your code into. Many of the scripts that you will be analyzing are based on Windows 7, but there are many other scripts that are based on either Windows XP or Windows Vista. Pick the one that you would like to use. Once you have a computer that you would like to inject a DLL into (For this tutorial we will be using Windows XP), we will need a few things. The first thing you will need to do is download Windows XP SP3. You can download the update in several different ways. Open Internet Explorer and type the following link into the address bar: A good place to get more information is here: NOTE: You may or may not have to register to get to the download. If you do have to register you can do so here: Once you have your install disc that you want to use you will need to reboot your computer once you have completed the install. After you have rebooted, plug your Windows XP install CD into your computer and boot from it. You should see a big black screen with the following words on it: Type in your username and password, and press enter: You will then be prompted for a language selection and you will proceed through the installation process: Once your system is installed and you have logged in you are ready to continue. We will need to install a program called PDM. You can get information on how to download and install this program from here: Once you have obtained the PDM software you will need to run it. If you do not run the program on your Windows XP you will not be able to do any of this stuff. Once you are runnning PDM you will be able to move on to the next step: If you have a system that is installed with Windows XP, you will not be able to run a Win7 install disc. You will have to either get a disc from Windows Vista or get a copy from Windows 7. Once you have a copy of Windows XP you can use the steps above, but you need to use the steps below: If you are using Windows 7 or Vista
