RS-232 Monitor is a handy utility that was especially designed to help you get data from a device connected to your computer's serial port. The program can display the data in binary, ASCII, HEX, decimal or IEEE754 formats. You can also use RS-232 Monitor to send data or even files at a certain time interval. You can use the program in two modes: you can monitor the serial port or use it to act as a modem. Here is what is currently possible: > With the Monitor Mode activated you can: - Add and remove serial port that you want to monitor. - Find devices connected to the port by specifying their serial numbers. - Display the contents of a file where the device sent its data. - Display the data from a device using the incoming, local or outgoing mode. - Check the baud rate of a device that is connected. - Asynchronously monitor data at a given interval. > With the Dialup Mode activated you can: - Dial and connect to an endpoint. - Specify the target endpoint's phone number. - Specify the dial-up connection connection parameters. The program can save your settings so that you can start a
