Field of the Invention This invention generally relates to a portable power tool such as an air powered hand tool, an electric powered hand tool or a pneumatic powered hand tool, and more specifically to such a tool having an integral air-driven actuator for driving a valve stem of a valve. 2. Description of the Related Art Some portable power tools, such as a rotary cutter, an air powered screwdriver, a hand-held sanding apparatus and a hand-held sander, are provided with an air powered actuator for driving a valve stem of a valve which causes air to be supplied to a variable air-perfusion nozzle for a tool bit, and also causes air to be exhausted from the variable air-perfusion nozzle to atmosphere. This type of actuator is required to reduce the maximum operating speed of the tool to a lower value to ensure that power is not applied to the air-powered actuator over a wide speed range. As a result, the durability and the operability of the tool are adversely affected. Furthermore, such a tool is required to have a clutch mechanism for effecting rotation of the valve stem in one direction and for preventing rotation of the valve stem in the other direction. Such a clutch mechanism can be mounted in a screw thread formed in the hollow valve stem, but, in order to move a piston of the clutch mechanism up and down, the piston must be connected to an air cylinder provided with a pneumatic spool. Hence, the air cylinder has to be separately provided with a high-pressure air source.Q: Storing an object's state into a
