To view a short documentary that features Stephanie in her work, visit: By all standards, the parent-child relationship should be one of the most harmonious in the animal kingdom. But for most of us, the relationship between parents and children often feels strained, especially when it comes to our children’s arts. As an artist mother raising two creative kids, I learned quickly that parenting a visual arts and theatre-loving teenager is not as straightforward as I anticipated. When my kids were young, I’d take them to galleries and museums with me. We’d visit children’s museums. We’d spend every summer in New York City with my husband’s friend, Michael, and his family, sampling all of the city’s most popular destinations. My kids loved everything from the Museum of Modern Art, the Museum of Natural History, the Metropolitan Museum, to
