Code View Diff Description: This site has moved to new web address: Dortmund coach Jurgen Klopp said the home fans should treat the game against Cologne as "the most important match of my life" after his side broke a Bundesliga record by reaching a third successive European final. Klopp's side beat RB Leipzig 2-0 on Wednesday, putting them in pole position to reach the Champions League final on 1 June at the Estadio Wanda Metropolitano against Manchester City or Paris Saint-Germain. And the German says the record book and those around the stadium will know it. "This is definitely the most important match of my life," said Klopp. "It is the biggest thing I can imagine and I hope the people in Dortmund can support us. "We had big differences in the past and this time it could be even bigger." Dortmund reached the final on the away goals rule after a 0-0 draw against Paris Saint-Germain in their semi-final first leg on Tuesday. Jurgen Klopp says Borussia Dortmund's win at Cologne secured a place in the Champions League final. Getty Cologne have one hand on the trophy after winning a penalty shootout against Juventus in the last four. The Bundesliga club also became the first German team to reach the Champions League final since Borussia Monchengladbach in 2000 and the first Cologne side in the European competition in their 110-year history. Klopp has high hopes that Dortmund can reach the final and he wants to fulfil a promise to his friend Andreas Kornmayer, the director of the Bundesliga club's sporting director. "I have a promise to him that he can forget about. We will win it and we will do everything to win," Klopp said. Dortmund's triumph over RB Leipzig was more emphatic than the 4-0 victory over Cologne, who were more familiar with the Bundesliga side after playing them in the quarter-finals of last year's competition. The home team dominated the first half and the result would have been different if Felix Passlack had converted his spot-kick in the first minute after he was brought down by

Compatible with Windows XP, Vista, 7, 8 and 8.1. Easy installation. Runs quietly in the background without taking up any memory. Simple user interface. Intuitive. Works with Spotify's new music-management UI. The history of other versions of this software: The first version of NowPlaying was published in 2014. There were some problems at that time, so the application wasn't properly updated for some time. In 2015, the developers updated the code and made a new version available. The update improved the application's code and made it much more powerful. NowPlaying is the only application of this type that supports Spotify's new music-management UI, which includes filters, playlists, playlists categories, playlists by music type, and much more. The application is also compatible with Spotify's new API to access artist information and playlists. NowPlaying is the only application of this type that can be configured to display the song info only for a few seconds when a new track starts, and then hide the notification. NowPlaying can also download music from Spotify's API and it supports some other popular music sources. The information about the supported music sources is located in the application's Help file, which is a very useful resource for users that want to set up the application. In order to stream the song info from the desktop to the application, NowPlaying uses one or more music events, which are constantly broadcasted by Spotify. This program uses less than 8 KB of space on your computer. What's New in Version 4.5.2: The latest update for NowPlaying requires 64-bit Windows versions. NowPlaying is compatible with Spotify's new music-management UI. It now supports the search feature of the application. The updated version doesn't need to be reinstalled after installation. After the update, NowPlaying no longer shows the message about its update when it is launched. Known Issues: On Windows 10, a reboot may be required after the update. Configuration for some themes is only available in the original installation of NowPlaying. Help and Support: NowPlaying's documentation has a good explanation of the features and their use, as well as a Help file that can be found in the main application folder. In order to answer your support queries, you can visit the application's forum or open a support ticket through the Help menu. NowPlaying's demo offers more than a
