This data is not only used in the on-field gameplay - every decision you make will affect the outcome of the match. But the most exciting aspect of FM20 - the aspect that will provide the ultimate football experience - is that this data can also be harnessed to create a virtual real-life player for the benefit of the players. This is the journey of Adnan Al-Kaissi to becoming the FIFA 22 virtual real-life player! See the full interview and exclusive gameplay below. How did you get to the starting line? I got into football after watching my cousin play in his first real-life match. Later on, I started playing Football Manager on PC to see if I could get a real-life team where I could play, but I couldn't find a player who could dribble the ball as well as I did. I started playing online and that led to my first transfer with Real Madrid. I played there for four seasons, winning the league once, the cup three times, the UEFA Cup once, the Spanish Super Cup once, and the FIFA Club World Cup once. How did you get to the FIFA Football Conference semi-finals? It was my second year with Madrid and I won the league again, but the season after I wasn't retained by the club. At that point, I made the decision to move to VfL Wolfsburg to become part of the club's youth academy and I've been there for eight years so far. I've now got the European champions of the past four years and one of the best coaches in the world as my coach. Was FM always your main outlet to play football? No. I was a striker and always played outfield. I was good at dribbling, shooting and passing - but I wasn't a natural. When I started my career, I wasn't very good at FIFA or FUT, but I liked it because it allowed you to play out on the wing, midfield or as a striker. When I saw how the system played, I loved it and started to really enjoy myself. Is that why you are so good at video games, given your interest in them? I used to be really interested in cricket, table tennis, motorbike racing and all sorts of other sports, and I loved playing them all.

FIFA Ultimate Team is a new mode that introduces a number of innovations aimed at creating the most authentic collectable game experience possible. Show All Old Comments According to a recent Reddit AMA and a post on Reddit, EA recently revealed a name for the next season of FIFA: The Journey. This comes as no surprise, as EA is sending their community on a journey to finding out what the next season of football is all about. The post also reveals a trailer, which can be found below: This one shows The Journey logo as a bird, presumably taking off, that leaves behind the message, "Begin your Journey." The theme was confirmed on Twitter the same day this post went live, and tweeted out to gamers and fans by EA Sports general manager of social media, Alex Bluemel: Our journey has just begun...

pic.twitter.com/J2PZcY8sGq — Alex Bluemel (@AlexEASPORTS) January 20, 2017 The trailer also shows off various footage of the Journey, such as passing moves, dribbling, and other cool tricks. It's also clear that EA is trying to promote this as an immersive, authentic, and emotionally-charged journey. The trailer is essentially a collage of different moments in the story from multiple characters, and it all seems to be going somewhere. This appears to be a very unique gameplay addition, as everything about it seems to be a departure from the regular gameplay systems in FIFA.
