White blood cells, platelets, hemoglobin, hematocrit and serum lipids in an 18-year-old black male alcoholic who drank between 1,000 and 2,000 ml of beer per day. An 18-year-old, alcoholic, black male with the diagnosis of paranoid schizophrenia, was treated with antipsychotic and antidepressant drugs. He drank an average of 1,000 ml beer per day and was unable to control his appetite. For the past year he had been under the supervision of a health-care professional and abstained from alcohol. The white blood cell count, platelet count, hemoglobin level, hematocrit and serum lipids were measured in this patient. The results were compared to normal values for blacks. The patient's white blood cell count was $2.8 \times 10^3/mm^3$ and his platelet count was $195 \times 10^3/mm^3$. The
